

codeLinc 6.0

Each year, Lincoln Financial hosts a 24-hour coding challenge where undergraduate students have an opportunity to solve technology-related problems currently affecting a Greensboro-based nonprofit organization.

Why you should go....

1. Lincoln Financial was so impressed with the TU's OwlHacks in the Spring that they wanted to include Temple students in this one of a kind event
2. TU is the ONLY school not in the North Carolina area that is invited - they LOVE TU's students and want to make sure they participate in this event.
3. We need a minimum of 25 students to attend so we can fill the bus - remember there is NO COST to you from the time you leave till the time you get back!
4. This is fantastic exposure to the hiring managers and executives at Lincoln Financial - this is where they recruit for the Technology Leadership Development Program, which is HIGHLY sought after.
5. All students who attend will be considered for internships at Lincoln Financial which has a large headquarters in Radnor PA as well as offices all around the country.
6. The timing is perfect - your classwork is not too bad yet - and it is before the CST Job Fair so you can get a hackathon on your resume prior to the Job Fair

Why students do not go to hackathons

1. I do not know enough.... So what !!! This is a great way to learn new stuff - go check it out - then you will be ready for the next one you go to!
2. I am only a freshman.... So what !!! Go meet people see what hackathons are like - have an adventure!
3. I will not know anyone....So what!!! This a great way to meet new people - most groups are always looking to include a new member - you will get new ideas and learn things you would never learn in a classroom.
